Human Rights Council

Fifty-eighth session

24 February–4 April 2025

Agenda item 6

Universal periodic review

Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review*

Ethiopia

* The annex is being circulated without formal editing, in the language of submission only.

Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its forty-seventh session from 4 to 15 November 2024. The review of Ethiopia was held at the 13th meeting, on 12 November 2024. The delegation of Ethiopia was headed by State Minister of Justice, Belayihun Yirga Kifle. At its 17th meeting, held on 15 November 2024, the Working Group adopted the report on Ethiopia.

2. On 10 January 2024, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Ethiopia: Algeria, Bangladesh and Netherlands (Kingdom of the).

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Ethiopia:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a);<sup>1</sup>

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b);<sup>2</sup>

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c).<sup>3</sup>

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Costa Rica, Germany, Liechtenstein, Portugal, on behalf of the Group of Friends on national mechanisms for implementation, reporting and follow-up, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to Ethiopia through the troika. These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of Ethiopia stated that Ethiopia had consistently valued the universal periodic review mechanism as an important tool for reinforcing good governance and promoting sustainable development and international cooperation in advancing human rights, and that the country had made diligent efforts to implement the recommendations from the previous review that it had supported. The national report had been prepared by an interministerial team coordinated by the Ministry of Justice, in consultation with government agencies, national human rights institutions, civil society organizations, the parliament and academia. A national monitoring, reporting and follow-up mechanism had been established to implement recommendations from human rights mechanisms. A national human rights data-collection mechanism had been developed in collaboration with OHCHR.

6. The renewed mandate of and reforms to the Ethiopian Human Rights Commission had enabled the Commission to comply with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles) and to be accredited as an A status institution.

7. New legislation had been adopted to reinforce the judiciary's institutional independence and operational autonomy and had been instrumental in advancing judicial self-administration. The legislation was also aimed at expediting court proceedings and ensuring due process, with special emphasis on protecting the rights of women, children and persons with disabilities. The adoption of the National Legal Aid Strategy would increase access to justice, especially for vulnerable and marginalized communities.

8. The electoral laws had been revised to ensure the independence of the National Election Board of Ethiopia and ensure inclusive participation in elections, particularly for vulnerable groups.
9. The new proclamation on civil society organizations had simplified registration processes and had eliminated funding ceilings, among other things, with the objective of promoting freedom of association.
10. The new media law had decriminalized defamation and established an independent media authority to safeguard media freedoms and to foster a diverse and vibrant media landscape.
11. A new proclamation enacted with a view to improving detention conditions provided for the construction of facilities that met international standards, an increase in the subsistence allowance for prisoners, the development of separate accommodation for women and juvenile offenders and a dedicated rehabilitation centre for youth.
12. The Ethiopian National Dialogue Commission, established in 2021 to address the root causes of the deep division and conflict in the country and mend historical grievances with the objective of ensuring peace, had made significant progress in facilitating open, inclusive and transparent dialogue.
13. Since the signing of the Cessation of Hostilities Agreement in 2022, Ethiopia had taken major strides, including by rebuilding conflict-affected areas and restoring essential services in Tigray, and had remained focused on transforming the Agreement into lasting peace.
14. In April 2024, a national victim-centred transitional justice policy had been adopted to ensure accountability for past grave human rights violations, promote truth-seeking, foster reconciliation, provide reparative measures to victims and undertake institutional reforms. The policy reflected the perseverance of Ethiopia in implementing the report of the joint investigation carried out by the Ethiopian Human Rights Commission and OHCHR, and the Cessation of Hostilities Agreement. Five essential pieces of legislation had been drafted to implement the policy and were ready for public and stakeholder consultation.
15. The Government had urged all armed groups involved in the conflicts in Oromia and Amhara to engage in dialogue and negotiation directed towards securing peace and reconciliation. Two rounds of negotiations had been conducted with the Oromo Liberation Army. Moreover, in Amhara, regional peace councils had been working diligently to facilitate discussions among the various factions and groups, despite the challenges posed by their disorganized command structures and fragmented leadership.
16. Equal importance had been placed on both socioeconomic rights and civil and political rights, as those rights had been recognized as being inherently indivisible and interdependent. Ethiopia had remained committed to ensuring the full realization of socioeconomic rights and civil and political rights in equal measure.
17. In 2019, the Green Legacy Initiative had been launched in response to climate change, with the objective of fostering a climate-resilient economy that ensured food sovereignty and expanded forest coverage. The Initiative had since become a national flagship programme and had led to 21 million volunteers planting over 25 billion seedlings, which had resulted in an increase in forest coverage.
18. Since 2019, Ethiopia had made significant progress in wheat production, which had advanced the realization of socioeconomic rights, particularly in the areas of food security and agricultural sustainability. In 2023, Ethiopia had reached a milestone by achieving self-sufficiency in wheat production and had been able to satisfy the domestic demand for wheat. Ethiopia had also begun exporting wheat.
19. Significant measures had been taken to prevent trafficking in persons and the smuggling of migrants, which included the conclusion of bilateral agreements with destination countries and the enactment of legislation, including the Overseas Employment Proclamation. However, Ethiopia had continued to face challenges in managing migration and preventing irregular migration, particularly trafficking in persons, which required coordinated international cooperation.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

20. During the interactive dialogue, 114 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

21. Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Montenegro, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, the Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovenia, South Africa, South Sudan, Spain, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, the Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Tunisia, Türkiye, Ukraine, the United Arab Emirates, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United Republic of Tanzania, the United States of America, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, Viet Nam, Zambia, Zimbabwe, Algeria, Angola, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belgium, Italy, Botswana, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, the Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechia, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Finland, France, the Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, the Holy See, Iceland, India, Indonesia, the Islamic Republic of Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libya, the Kingdom of the Netherlands and the Niger made statements. The complete version of the statements can be found in the webcast archived on the United Nations website.<sup>4</sup>

22. The delegation of Ethiopia stated that Ethiopia was committed to ensuring accountability for any human rights violations. In that regard, significant strides had been made, including in strengthening the independence of the judiciary, strengthening the mandate of the Ethiopian Human Rights Commission, promptly deploying investigators and prosecutors to sites of alleged atrocities and facilitating access for OHCHR to enable it to conduct joint investigations with the Commission.

23. During the reporting period, 2,117 persons had been charged with crimes allegedly committed in the context of the conflict. They included high-ranking and mid-level military officials, police officers and local administration leaders. Moreover, investigations by the Ethiopian National Defence Force, through its military justice mechanism, had resulted in convictions and sentences, including of life imprisonment.

24. An interministerial task force had rigorously collected and preserved voluminous evidence from Tigray, Amhara and Afar, including 10,069 witness testimonies, 3,087 written documents and 2,599 video and photographic records.

25. With a view to effectively implementing the transitional justice process nationwide, in line with the transitional justice policy, five proclamations relating to the recognition of international crimes, including crimes against humanity and war crimes, the establishment of an institutional and law reform commission, and the creation of a post of special prosecutor, a special judicial bench and a truth and reconciliation commission had been drafted and were ready for public and stakeholder consultation.

26. Child and women protection units, specializing in investigations and prosecutions, and child- and victim-friendly benches had been established in all federal and regional courts. Eighty-two one-stop centres had been opened across the country to provide medical and psychological care, legal support and temporary shelter for survivors of sexual violence. A simplified process for reporting gender-based violence had been introduced at safe houses and rehabilitation centres.

27. Medical and psychosocial assistance was being provided to victims of sexual and gender-based violence in Amhara and Afar. A project focusing on skills training and the economic rehabilitation of victims of sexual and gender-based violence was under way. Five safe houses and rehabilitation centres in conflict-affected localities/woredas of Amhara and Afar had been built with government funding, and thousands of psychosocial support providers in Afar and Amhara had received training from the Ministry of Women and Social Affairs.

28. The Ethiopian National Defence Force had been trained in international humanitarian law and had consistently directed its operations towards legitimate military targets. However, the frequent use of civilian sites, such as places of worship, schools and medical facilities, as military bases by insurgent forces had raised challenges for the Ethiopian National Defence Force.

29. Since the previous review, Ethiopia had submitted periodic reports in fulfilment of its reporting obligations arising from the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

30. Ethiopia had welcomed visits from the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression and OHCHR in 2019 and 2023, respectively. The Chair/Rapporteur of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances and the Special Rapporteur on the right to development had attended a human rights conference in Ethiopia. Ethiopia had responded in a timely manner to communications from special procedures. However, some requests for visits from special procedures had not been accommodated due to the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) pandemic and the armed conflict in the northern part of the country.

31. The International Commission of Human Rights Experts on Ethiopia had been established while Ethiopia had been taking crucial steps to carry out and implement the recommendations from the joint investigation report of OHCHR and the Ethiopian Human Rights Commission. Consequently, Ethiopia had consistently maintained that establishing the Commission had been unnecessary, as it duplicated work already under way and risked impeding meaningful progress on the ground. Nonetheless, Ethiopia had demonstrated good faith and willingness to engage with the Commission and had granted it access to the country with a view to proposing reasonable guidelines for its work. Regrettably, despite that cooperation, the Commission's members had chosen to move forward with their preconceived views, which had influenced the Commission's report, which lacked credibility. As a result, Ethiopia had objected to the report in its entirety, despite the country's history of working closely with United Nations human rights mechanisms.

32. The media law, which had replaced previous, repressive laws, empowered the Ethiopian Media Authority to act as an independent regulatory body, ensured that media oversight remained free from executive influence, allowed for foreign investment in the national media sector and recognized the right to form media associations, which had led to the establishment of the Ethiopian Media Council.

33. The capacity, impartiality and independence of the National Election Board of Ethiopia had been amplified by a 2019 proclamation, which allowed for the involvement of stakeholders in the process of nominating board members and had removed any political influence over the Board.

34. The new electoral law had lifted restrictions on election observers and candidates, established clear grievance-handling mechanisms, strengthened due process rights and encouraged inclusivity and broader political participation through improved incentives, with a specific focus on boosting the participation of vulnerable groups. The endorsement requirement of 5,000 signatures for independent candidates had been reduced to 3,000 signatures for persons with disabilities and allowed for the allocation of additional election funding to political parties with candidates with disabilities. The media law complemented those measures by mandating broadcasters to set aside additional airtime free of charge for the election campaigns of political parties with candidates with disabilities. The electoral law recognized the unique challenges faced by internally displaced persons and made provision for them to vote at designated polling stations in areas in which they temporarily resided. The COVID-19 pandemic had forced the postponement of the national election scheduled for 2020, which had led to the election being held in 2021. The participation of persons with disabilities had reached unprecedented levels, and women's representation in the legislature had also dramatically increased.

35. The five-year Ethiopia Health Sector Transformation Plan aimed at ensuring the achievement of the three components of universal health coverage was being implemented. In 2024, the 1993 health policy had been revised to focus on primary healthcare and the equity and quality of health services. Health posts and health centres had been expanded, and the health extension programme had continued to deliver cost-effective basic services.

36. Family planning services were available in almost all public health facilities, and there had been an increase in the coverage of reproductive, maternal, neonatal and child health services. In 2023, 75 per cent of pregnant women had received delivery services in health facilities. There had also been a 66 per cent increase in the number of women who had received comprehensive abortion care services in the previous five years, which had resulted in a reduction in the maternal mortality rate, and obstetric fistula prevention, treatment and reintegration services had been prioritized.

37. All health facilities offered integrated management of newborn and childhood illnesses to minimize child mortality and improve children's health, which had led to a decrease in the neonatal mortality rate in 2023. Disability corners were being established in health facilities to ensure equitable access for persons with disabilities.

38. Under the HIV/AIDS national strategic plan, 90 per cent of all people living with HIV knew their status, and 94 per cent of them were receiving drug therapy. A plan to eliminate malaria and a strategy to eradicate tuberculosis were in place. A strategy focusing on the reduction of risky behaviours and the promotion of a healthy lifestyle had been developed, and other strategies had been implemented to improve hygiene and environmental health.

39. The health system had been challenged by the impact of conflict in some parts of the country. Efforts had been made to restore damaged facilities and provide health services to internally displaced persons in shelters.

40. A public health management system at the national and subnational levels had been developed to coordinate and strengthen all efforts to prevent, detect and respond to public health emergencies.

41. A national health sector accountability strategy had been developed to handle complaints pertaining to drug availability, professional integrity and infrastructure-related grievance mechanisms in 864 districts.

42. The revised Education and Training Policy enabled students to spend at least 20 per cent of their time on practical education related to their future field of work. It also provided for ongoing professional development and a professional licensing system to enable teachers, trainers and educational leaders to improve their competencies.

43. A draft proclamation on education, which was undergoing a validation process, would provide for a national education fund to support various educational initiatives. Different strategies continued to be implemented to address the numerous challenges associated with the provision of quality and inclusive education. Targets to increase the enrolment of students with disabilities had been set in the Education Sector Development Roadmap (2020–2025). A proclamation enacted in 2019 provided for refugees to have access to early childhood care and primary education in the same circumstances as nationals.

44. The national school feeding policy framework was being implemented to ensure sustainable national school feeding programmes. The Pastoralist Education Strategy had been developed to provide special support for pastoralist communities and ensure the provision of quality education.

45. In 2021, lessons for students from the first to the twelfth grades had been televised due to school closures necessitated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Lessons had also been delivered in sign language.

46. In 2023, a proclamation to provide for the autonomy of universities had been enacted to enhance the quality and effectiveness of higher education institutions and their international competitiveness.

47. Refugees had been provided with a range of rights, including access to quality education, essential healthcare services and the opportunity to seek employment, pursuant to the Refugees Proclamation. The Proclamation was implemented through regulatory frameworks and guidelines, including a directive on the right to work. Significant steps had been taken, including through a “whole-of-government” approach, to create an enabling environment to promote the inclusion of refugees in the socioeconomic sector. Considerable efforts had been made to improve birth registration, which served to provide legal identity, mitigate the risk of statelessness and ensure that refugee children had access to basic rights and essential services.

48. A draft proclamation to prevent internal displacement, provide necessary protection and assistance and ensure safe corridors for humanitarian access had been prepared. The safe and voluntary relocation of internally displaced persons had been provided for in strategic frameworks such as the 2019 Durable Solutions Initiative and the 2020 National Social Protection Policy.

49. Ethiopia had been working alongside United Nations agencies and various non-governmental organizations to enhance protection and improve assistance for internally displaced persons. That collaboration had focused on breaking down administrative barriers that impeded the flow of aid.

50. In 2024, a comprehensive national policy and strategy on disaster risk management had been developed.

51. Ensuring the right to work was guided by the National Employment Policy and Strategy, the Manufacturing Industry Policy, the Plan of Action for Job Creation, the Homegrown Economic Reform Agenda, the second Growth and Transformation Plan and the current 10-year National Development Plan, among others. In addition, the amendment of several pieces of legislation and the enactment of new legislation had enshrined provisions aimed at creating jobs and ensuring favourable conditions of work.

52. In relation to the right to social security, the coverage of the Productive Safety Net Programme had been widened to accommodate an increased number of beneficiaries. There had also been improvements in the social security scheme covering public and private sector employees through legislative amendments and the introduction of the pension adjustment range, among other measures.

53. Wheat production had been revolutionized through the use of improved, climate-resilient, high-yielding and heat-tolerant wheat varieties, which had led to a substantial increase in crop production. The Participatory Small-Scale Irrigation Development Programme (2017–2024) had contributed to ensuring food security at the household level.

54. Several measures had been introduced to address water scarcity, accessibility and affordability, including the One WASH National Programme, which had enabled more than 20 million people to gain access to clean water. The second phase of the Urban Water Supply and Sanitation Project had brought huge investments in piped water systems, contributing to a rise in water supply coverage and better sanitation facilities in cities, with a focus on affordability for low-income households. The urban development policy had been implemented in relation to access to land and housing and infrastructure development, among other areas. Corridor development efforts had offered potential benefits, including economic growth, job creation and infrastructure improvement.

55. Sustained economic growth over the previous decade had led to significant progress in reducing poverty and hunger and in improving health, education and living conditions. There had also been improvements in development fuelled by the Homegrown Economic Reform Agenda. Sectors key to alleviating poverty, such as agriculture, education, health, water, roads and natural resources management, had been prioritized and received about two thirds of the budget.

56. Measures had been taken to eradicate violence against women and girls and included the strict enforcement of relevant criminal laws, the conducting of media campaigns and dialogues with religious and community leaders, conversations in schools, the establishment of hotlines on gender-based violence and harmful traditional practices, the prioritization of the eradication of gender-based violence in the 10-year National Development Plan, the implementation of the national costed road map to end child marriage and female genital mutilation/cutting and the revision of the strategic plan for an integrated and multisectoral response to violence against women and children and child justice in 2023, among others. In the context of the conflict, the transitional justice policy provided for the prosecution of cases of sexual violence, psychological support and counselling and the availability of rehabilitation and shelters.

57. The delegation stated that Ethiopia acknowledged the existence of challenges, particularly in relation to the armed conflict and the impact of climate change, but remained committed to addressing them in a manner that respected the rights and freedoms of all Ethiopians and ensured sustainable peace and development.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations
