Human Rights Council

Thirty-eighth session

18 June–6 July 2018

Agenda item 6

Universal periodic review

Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review *

Montenegro

Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-ninth session from 15 to 26 January 2018. The review of Montenegro was held at the 11th meeting, on 22 January 2018. The delegation of Montenegro was headed by the Deputy Prime Minister for the Political System, the Interior and Foreign Policy and Minister of Justice, Zoran Pažin. At its 17th meeting, held on 25 January 2018, the Working Group adopted the report on Montenegro.

2. On 10 January 2018, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Montenegro: Hungary, Nepal and Panama.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Montenegro:

- (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/MNE/1);
- (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/MNE/2);
- (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/MNE/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Brazil, Czechia, Germany, Liechtenstein, Portugal, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to Montenegro through the troika. These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of Montenegro stated that its national report provided an overview of the progress made and the remaining challenges for strengthening the national human rights protection system, and that it clearly reflected the commitment of Montenegro to human rights.

6. Since the previous review, Montenegro had achieved satisfactory results in the fields of judicial reform and the fight against corruption, and had taken significant steps towards the establishment of a comprehensive anti-discrimination framework. In that regard, several bodies had been set up, such as the Social Council, the Council for the Rule of Law, the Gender Equality Council, the Anti-Discrimination Council, the Council for the Care of Persons with Disabilities, and the Child Rights Council. Montenegro had also reinforced the capacity of the Protector of Human Rights and Freedoms and strengthened the powers of the national preventive mechanism against torture.

7. Montenegro was aware of the importance of an independent and efficient judiciary to ensure legal security and the democratic functioning of institutions. Accordingly, during the reporting period, Montenegro had undertaken reforms to strengthen the independence of the judiciary. In addition to the adoption of the Strategy for Judicial Reform 2014–2018, several new laws had been enacted to develop integrated, transparent and merit-based selection of judges and prosecutors. Access to justice had also been enhanced through the adoption of amendments to the Law on Free Legal Aid in 2015. Moreover, a centralized anti-corruption institutional framework had been built with the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Agency as an autonomous, independent State institution.

8. Montenegro had made significant progress in combating discrimination through the adoption of amendments to the laws on the prohibition of discrimination, of a new Law on the Prohibition of Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities, and of amendments further expanding the jurisdiction of the Protector of Human Rights and Freedoms. Media campaigns to raise awareness of discriminatory behaviours were also being implemented.

9. Violence against women and children remained a serious challenge. The main task in that area was to ensure a timely and appropriate multidisciplinary response to victims and to address existing shortcomings in the application of the relevant national legislation.

10. In the area of children's rights, Montenegro had amended the Criminal Code to ensure closer compliance with the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, and with the Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Montenegro had also adopted its first Strategy for the Prevention and Protection of Children against Violence, and was in the process of drafting the new National Action Plan for Children for the period 2018–2022.

11. Montenegro was working to establish a mechanism for determining statelessness, pass a new Law on Foreigners, and recognize the status of stateless persons, who would be given the possibility to exercise their rights in line with the conventions ratified by the country.

12. Despite the initiatives taken by Montenegro, persons with disabilities were still exposed to social marginalization and there was a need to further strengthen the capacities of relevant institutions and provide them with adequate resources. Under the Law on Social and Child Welfare, day-care centres had been established as a support service for life in the community.

13. Montenegro had made visible progress in developing an adequate legislative and institutional framework on minority rights. Within that context, a new strategy for the period 2017–2019 had been adopted in order to find a permanent solution for refugees and displaced persons from the former Yugoslavia. Specific measures had been introduced to promote the integration of the Roma and Egyptian populations into the educational system, such as a preparatory kindergarten for children not covered by formal education and a campaign for their enrolment in the first year of primary school.

14. Montenegro had been cooperating with international human rights mechanisms, which had resulted in its candidacy for membership of the Human Rights Council for the period 2022–2024.

15. Montenegro thanked all the countries that had submitted advance questions, indicating that efforts were under way to develop a national mechanism for reporting and monitoring the implementation of the universal periodic review recommendations. Montenegro had been selected as a pilot country for the establishment of an OHCHR database to facilitate such monitoring.

16. A strategy to investigate war crimes was being implemented in order to address impunity for such crimes. Searches of unprotected databases of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 were being made in order to collect evidence on preliminary stage cases of war crimes and to gather evidence for possible new cases. In 2015, Montenegro had adopted the Law on Reparation to Victims of Crimes of Violence, under which some €5.7 million had already been paid out.

17. Montenegro had improved its legislative framework to combat human trafficking and was implementing the Anti-Human Trafficking Strategy 2012–2018. In order to improve the identification of potential victims, an operational team for combating trafficking in human beings was in the process of being established.

18. With regard to freedom of expression, a new commission had been created in 2016 to monitor the actions of the competent authorities in investigating cases of threats and violence against journalists, the killing of journalists, and attacks on media assets. Statistics from 2017 confirmed that Montenegro was not a country in which recorded violence against the media could be characterized as a systemic problem.

19. Awareness-raising campaigns were being run to eradicate the practices of early and forced marriage, which were still dominant among the Roma and Egyptian populations. The selective abortion of female fetuses was not permitted. However, as private health institutions were not electronically linked to the public sector, it was very difficult to determine the number of selective abortions, or even those carried out for other reasons.

20. Montenegro was planning to adopt new legislation to ensure respect for basic labour rights, including a new labour law, by the end of 2018. No cases of child labour had been reported in 2017.

21. With regard to the fight against discrimination based on sexual orientation or gender identity, a strategy for improving the quality of life of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons had been implemented through a multisectoral approach. In the security sector, a network of police contact points had been established, along with a special "trust team", as mechanisms for strengthening mutual trust and improving the safety of those persons. The Criminal Code and the Anti-Discrimination Law had also been improved, and the Law on Registered Partnership, currently being drafted, was due for adoption by the end of 2018.

22. With regard to gender equality, all national and local bodies were required to allocate funds for implementing activities from the Action Plan for Achieving Gender Equality when planning their annual budgets. The representation of women in Parliament had increased and representatives of all political parties had joined the Women's Political Network.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

23. During the interactive dialogue, 73 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

24. Namibia commended Montenegro for the strengthening of its human rights normative and institutional framework. It encouraged Montenegro to further strengthen efforts to promote freedom of expression, gender equality, protection of children against violence, and the integration of national minorities and stateless persons into society.

25. Nepal welcomed the measures taken by Montenegro in the field of judicial reform and its efforts to fight corruption, combat discrimination against women and against persons with disabilities, and fight domestic violence and violence against women. It encouraged Montenegro to strengthen the office of the Protector of Human Rights and Freedoms in accordance with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles).

26. The Netherlands welcomed the amendments adopted to bring the criminal provision on torture into accordance with international standards, and was encouraged by the investigations into and proceedings of cases of war crimes. It encouraged Montenegro to take further measures to ensure that allegations of torture, high-level corruption and attacks against journalists were adequately investigated.

27. Peru welcomed the ratification of numerous international human rights instruments and the creation of the Minority Council.

28. The Philippines commended Montenegro for its submission of a universal periodic review midterm report in 2015 and noted the establishment of an institutional framework aimed at strengthening policies and mechanisms to fulfil its commitments to human rights.

29. Mozambique congratulated Montenegro for becoming a State party to almost all the international human rights instruments. It noted the measures taken to strengthen the independence, objectivity and accountability of the judiciary, and the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Agency as an independent and autonomous State institution.

30. Qatar welcomed the concrete measures taken to improve the legislative framework to promote the rights of children. It also commended Montenegro on its human rights training and awareness-raising activities, particularly those on the protection of journalists, freedom of expression and the right to a fair trial.

31. The Republic of Korea welcomed the legal and policy measures taken by Montenegro to strengthen the independence, impartiality and efficiency of the judiciary, and commended its commitment to gender equality and non-discrimination.

32. The Republic of Moldova welcomed the improvements made by Montenegro to its legislative framework to address discrimination, including discrimination against women, the decriminalization of defamation and the strengthening of the legislative framework governing the media. It also welcomed the reinforcement of the mandate of the national human rights institution as the national mechanism for the prevention of torture, and of the institutional mechanisms against discrimination.

33. Romania congratulated Montenegro for its commitment to implementing a number of strategies and action plans aimed at advancing human rights in the country.

34. The Russian Federation expressed concern about cases of torture and other cruel treatment of detainees, and about the increase in crimes of human trafficking. It noted the continuing discrimination against national minority groups, including the Roma population.

35. Senegal commended Montenegro for improving its human rights legislative and institutional framework, and noted with satisfaction the establishment of institutions for monitoring the implementation of the human rights protection policies developed by the Ministry of Human and Minority Rights.

36. Serbia welcomed the measures taken to strengthen the role of the Protector of Human Rights and Freedoms, and the adoption of the new Strategy for Domestic Violence Protection 2016–2020. It commended Montenegro on the improvement of its anti-discrimination framework through the amendments to the Anti-Discrimination Law.

37. Sierra Leone congratulated Montenegro for its implementation of a number of policies, such as the Inclusive Education Strategy, the Strategy for the Integration of Persons with Disabilities and the Strategy for the Prevention and Protection of Children against Violence. It welcomed the ratification of several international human rights instruments and encouraged Montenegro to raise awareness and adopt stringent measures to combat the practices of child, early and forced marriage among the Roma, Ashkali and Egyptian communities.

38. Slovakia welcomed the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention of the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure, the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness. It recognized legal reforms relating to the establishment of a comprehensive anti-discrimination framework and valued the progress made in strengthening the independence of the judiciary.

39. Slovenia welcomed the positive legislative developments regarding non-discrimination and the measures taken to counter sexist stereotypes. It encouraged Montenegro to combat prejudice against members of ethnic minorities and provide public servants with human rights education. It also encouraged Montenegro to pay special attention to the need to improve birth registration, particularly for children belonging to ethnic minorities and for abandoned children.

40. The State of Palestine welcomed the Strategy for Roma and Egyptian Social Inclusion 2016–2020 and the steps taken regarding business and human rights.

41. Sweden commended Montenegro for its continuing work to fulfil its human rights obligations and encouraged it to make further efforts in that regard.

42. Switzerland welcomed the inclusion of civil society representatives and journalists in the commission that had been established to investigate cases of violence and attacks against journalists, and expressed concern about the extremely polarized environment for the work of civil society representatives and journalists.

43. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia commended Montenegro for its commitment to the universal periodic review process and the numerous measures it had taken to implement recommendations from the second cycle. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia noted with appreciation the development of a national mechanism for follow-up to and coordination of the implementation of international obligations.

44. Timor-Leste noted with appreciation the adoption of the Law on the Protector of Human Rights and Freedoms, the Anti-Discrimination Law and the Law on Gender Equality. It commended Montenegro for the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Agency.

45. Turkmenistan noted with interest how Montenegro had incorporated the recommendations of the second cycle into its policies. It welcomed the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Agency as an autonomous State institution and the efforts made to implement several human rights strategies.

46. Ukraine noted positively that the report had been prepared through inclusive national consultations, and acknowledged the steps taken to implement recommendations from the second cycle, including the ratification of international human rights instruments. It noted the financial contribution that Montenegro had made to the work of OHCHR.

47. The United Kingdom noted the significant progress made in legislative reform and institution-building. It encouraged Montenegro to implement the recommendations on electoral reform made by the Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights, part of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. It raised concern about the lack of progress with regard to the fight against impunity for war crimes, the protection of media freedom and the investigation of attacks on journalists.

48. The United States welcomed the establishment of a commission to monitor investigations into attacks and threats against journalists, but expressed concern that Montenegro had failed to make progress with those investigations. It was discouraged by the continuous discrimination against minority groups, especially the Roma population and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex communities.

49. Uruguay highlighted the ratification of numerous international human rights instruments and the reform of the Criminal Code to criminalize the sale, prostitution and use of children in pornography. It welcomed measures to improve the normative and institutional framework to eradicate discrimination against women.

50. Uzbekistan commended Montenegro for its ratification of several human rights treaties and the adoption of several laws, including on anti-discrimination. It noted, however, concerns about existing stereotypes concerning minorities and the high unemployment rate among minorities.

51. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela recognized the efforts made by Montenegro to protect human rights. It welcomed the new legal framework on the fight against discrimination and the legal amendments to punish the dissemination of hate speech, and highlighted the measures taken to better protect victims of domestic violence.

52. Albania commended Montenegro for its commitment to implementing its strategies on minorities and on anti-trafficking, and its efforts to ensure gender equality and combat domestic violence. It inquired about the reform aiming to ensure the necessary funding to promote the rights of minorities.

53. Algeria noted the efforts made by Montenegro to improve education and teaching services, particularly with regard to inclusive education and equal access to education for minorities. It also noted the legislative measures taken to combat discrimination against women and the special measures for the protection of the rights of persons with disabilities.

54. Andorra noted the ratification of several core human rights treaties and the adoption in 2015 of the Law on the Prohibition of Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities.

55. Angola encouraged Montenegro to continue its efforts to implement the recommendations it had accepted at the previous review, especially those concerning inclusive education, the integration of persons with disabilities and combating human trafficking.

56. Argentina welcomed the establishment of the strategy for improving the quality of life of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons, the Action Plan for Achieving Gender Equality and the Strategy for the Integration of Persons with Disabilities.

57. Armenia noted with appreciation the measures taken by Montenegro to increase the representation of women in Parliament and promote women's entrepreneurship. It also noted measures taken to promote the right to education for all, including human rights education, and welcomed the steps taken to combat human trafficking.

58. Australia was concerned about reports of discrimination and violence against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons and of undue political influence and intimidation of journalists, despite several measures taken to address those issues. It was also concerned about reports that corruption remained prevalent among the police and the judiciary, and in the health, education and employment sectors.

59. Austria commended Montenegro for its efforts to strengthen the rule of law, including the reform of the judiciary. It noted that, despite the progress achieved in addressing discrimination, the Roma population continued to be subjected to discrimination in various areas of life. It was concerned about violence against journalists.

60. Azerbaijan noted the reforms undertaken by Montenegro to effectively combat corruption, particularly the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Agency and the adoption of legislation on the obstruction of justice and undue influence.

61. Belarus noted the establishment of various institutions for the protection and promotion of human rights. It noted, however, the limited impact made by those institutions. Belarus hoped that the Government would give due attention to increasing the effectiveness of its national human rights mechanisms.

62. Bhutan noted the efforts made by the Government to protect the rights of vulnerable groups, and the amendments made to the Criminal Code and the Law on Gender Equality.

63. Bosnia and Herzegovina commended the Government for its efforts to strengthen the institutional framework on human rights and for ratifying almost all the international human rights instruments. It congratulated Montenegro for beginning to develop a national mechanism to follow up on the implementation of international obligations.

64. Brazil invited Montenegro to establish a statelessness determination procedure. It noted the efforts made to ensure redress for war crimes. It commended the adoption of laws on anti-discrimination and gender equality, the establishment of the national mechanism for the prevention of torture and the adoption of the 2030 National Strategy for Sustainable Development.

65. Bulgaria acknowledged the implementation of the 2014 Law on the Protector of Human Rights and Freedoms, strengthening the mandate and independence of the Ombudsman. It commended Montenegro for the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Agency and for its efforts to enhance gender equality and protect the rights of the child.

66. Canada welcomed the efforts to address discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons and to uphold the right to freedom of assembly and expression by permitting pride marches in Podgorica. It was concerned about reports of media outlets and journalists being exposed to economic pressure and threats.

67. Chile congratulated Montenegro for its approval of the amended Anti-Discrimination Law, which had redefined the terms “discrimination” and “hate speech” by integrating the elements of the European standards into its text. Chile was concerned that some of the international human rights instruments had not yet been ratified.

68. China noted the adoption of laws on anti-discrimination, on gender equality and on the rights of persons with disabilities, as well as the adoption of strategies on the prevention of domestic violence and the protection of children from violence.

69. The delegation of Montenegro stated that further action had been taken to prevent and repress corruption. Over 1,000 cases had been brought against public officials, resulting in more than 200 dismissals. Moreover, corruption cases examined by the Special State Prosecution Office during the four years since its establishment had resulted in 99 investigations and 36 indictments, all of which had been confirmed. Furthermore, 18 cases had been resolved with convictions. As for illicitly obtained property, financial investigations had been conducted into 119 natural persons and 14 legal persons.

70. The further development of media freedom was a State priority. In that regard, the adoption of new legislation was planned to prevent any undue political influence of the public broadcaster and a new law on media freedom had been planned for adoption in 2018. Montenegro considered combating violence against journalists to be a priority and 24 such cases had resulted in 13 indictments and 9 convictions over a four-year period.

71. As for the rights and freedoms of the Roma and Egyptian populations, the third Strategy for Roma and Egyptian Social Inclusion had been implemented for the period 2016–2020. The strategy was based on the international instruments on human rights and minority rights that had been signed by Montenegro and it was fully consistent with the European framework for the social inclusion of the Roma population. Its goal, which was based on the principles of equality and non-discrimination, was to achieve the social inclusion of the Roma and Egyptian populations with a view to improving their socioeconomic status. In the field of education, the number of Roma children attending school at all levels had increased, scholarships were available for Roma and Egyptian students at high school and university, and free textbooks were provided to Roma and Egyptian children at primary school.

72. Côte d’Ivoire welcomed the strengthening of the normative and institutional framework for the protection of human rights. However, it noted that several challenges remained, particularly in the field of civil and political rights and equality and non-discrimination, including for persons with disabilities and members of minorities.

73. Croatia welcomed the legislative efforts to combat domestic violence and encouraged Montenegro to make further progress in that regard, including by providing more shelters for women who had been victims of such violence and adequate funding for the non-governmental organizations that provided services to victims. Croatia encouraged Montenegro to continue its post-war efforts concerning missing persons, war crime trials and compensation to victims.

74. Czechia appreciated the informative presentation, which had provided an overview of the human rights situation in Montenegro. Czechia acknowledged the progress that had been achieved in several human rights areas and encouraged Montenegro to continue its efforts.

75. Ecuador congratulated Montenegro for its progress in the area of human rights, especially for its Strategy for the Integration of Persons with Disabilities and the National Strategy for Sustainable Development.

76. Egypt commended Montenegro for its progress in promoting human rights, including through the improvement of its legal framework, the fight against discrimination and the adoption of the national strategy to combat human trafficking.

77. Estonia commended Montenegro for its cooperation with the United Nations human rights mechanisms, including the elaboration of a national mechanism to follow up on its international human rights obligations. Estonia welcomed the efforts made to fight violence against women and encouraged Montenegro to take further steps to combat domestic violence.

78. France noted that Montenegro had made significant progress in strengthening the rule of law, in the protection of minorities and in the fight against corruption with the establishment of a specialized agency.

79. Gabon acknowledged the measures taken by Montenegro to fight corruption through the adoption of legislation, the creation of an agency to prevent corruption, and the establishment of a Special Prosecutor. Gabon congratulated Montenegro for the efforts made to combat violence against women, in particular through the reform of the Criminal Code.

80. Georgia noted with appreciation the policies adopted by Montenegro to promote gender equality and eliminate discrimination and violence. Georgia welcomed its ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence and the adoption of the new Strategy for Domestic Violence Protection 2016–2020.

81. Germany commended Montenegro for its extension of the mandate of the Protector of Human Rights and Freedoms and the improvements made to the quality of life of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons. It also commended Montenegro for its cooperation with civil society in preparation for the current universal periodic review.

82. Ghana noted the legislative developments in the field of non-discrimination and the adoption of amendments to the electoral law aiming at improving the participation of women in the electoral process. It noted that, despite the efforts made, persons of Roma, Ashkali and Egyptian origin still faced discrimination.

83. Greece commended Montenegro for its implementation of human rights strategies and action plans relating to minorities, gender equality, domestic violence, persons with disabilities and human trafficking. It also commended legislative and institutional progress made in the field of the rule of law and the fight against corruption.

85. Iceland welcomed the efforts made by Montenegro to develop a stable legal and institutional framework for the protection and promotion of human rights.

86. India commended Montenegro for its progress in the protection of human rights, particularly for the most vulnerable groups, and noted the strategies and action plans focusing on women, children, the elderly, minorities and persons with disabilities. It also commended Montenegro for the establishment of the Child Rights Council and the adoption of the Law on the Prohibition of Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities.

87. Indonesia welcomed the numerous human rights strategies introduced by Montenegro to protect vulnerable groups. It commended the adoption of the 2030 National Strategy for Sustainable Development and the establishment of a national monitoring mechanism to oversee recommendations from the United Nations system.

88. The Islamic Republic of Iran took positive note of several measures taken by Montenegro, including specific strategies to ensure equal access to education for minorities and to increase the number of Roma children attending primary school. It expressed concern about the urgent need for sustained efforts to increase the level of attendance of Roma children in primary schools, and to overcome negative stereotypes against them.

89. Iraq welcomed the progress made by Montenegro in the implementation of the recommendations it had received during the second review cycle and highlighted the fact that several bodies had been established to protect human rights.

90. Ireland welcomed the efforts made by Montenegro to strengthen the impartiality of the judiciary. It noted positively the new Strategy for Domestic Violence Protection 2016–2020 and welcomed the introduction of measures aimed at protecting the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons and addressing discrimination against minorities.

91. Italy commended Montenegro for its engagement in the fight against domestic violence, violence against women and human trafficking. It appreciated the efforts made in the field of human rights education and training, and the results achieved in the fight against discrimination.

92. Libya welcomed the progress made by Montenegro in the promotion of human rights. It also welcomed the adoption of a number of legislative measures aiming to strengthen the impartiality of the judiciary and of measures aiming to improve the electoral law in order to increase the participation of women in public life.

93. Madagascar commended Montenegro for its ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence. It welcomed the adoption of a national strategy against trafficking in human beings, the Law on Protection against Domestic Violence and amendments to the Criminal Code to improve the protection of victims of domestic violence.

94. Malaysia noted the development of various national strategies to advance human rights in Montenegro. It hoped that the adoption of the Law on Protection against Domestic Violence and the Strategy for Domestic Violence Protection 2016–2020 would address the incidence of domestic violence against women.

95. Maldives commended Montenegro for its efforts to achieve gender equality and increase the participation of women in political decision-making, and for its commitment to combating corruption through the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Agency in 2016.

96. Mexico acknowledged the progress made by Montenegro in the protection of children and adolescents through its implementation of the Strategy for the Prevention and Protection of Children against Violence 2017–2021, and the adoption of the Strategy for Domestic Violence Protection 2016–2020.

97. Morocco welcomed the launch of the process aiming to establish a national follow-up and coordination mechanism for the implementation of international human rights obligations. It also welcomed the legislative measures adopted to strengthen the independence and impartiality of the judiciary.

98. Portugal welcomed the comprehensive national report produced by Montenegro.

99. The Plurinational State of Bolivia welcomed the work of the Ministry of Human and Minority Rights as the public institution in charge of combating discrimination and developing human rights protection policies.

100. In its concluding statement, the delegation of Montenegro highlighted the efforts the Government had made to combat violence against women, citing the formation of 17 multidisciplinary teams for the prevention of domestic violence and violence against children, and the adoption of amendments to the protocol of action to prevent domestic violence. Plans to combat violence against children also included the development of shelters, the introduction of a free helpline and the establishment of crisis centres.

101. The definition of torture contained in the Criminal Code was consistent with the one contained in the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. More serious sanctions were planned for acts of torture committed by public officials, and the possibility of non-statutory limitation was being considered.

102. Ensuring inclusive education for children with disabilities was a priority, and some 4,892 children with disabilities had been enrolled in the mainstream school system in Montenegro, while only 80 primary schoolchildren and 60 secondary schoolchildren were enrolled in three specialized resource centres.

103. Montenegro reaffirmed its commitment to the universal periodic review process and thanked all delegations for their questions, recommendations and observations.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations

104. The recommendations formulated during the interactive dialogue/listed below have been examined by Montenegro and enjoy the support of Montenegro:

104.1 Take measures to ensure that allegations of torture, ill-treatment or excessive use of force by the police are investigated by an independent body and all perpetrators are brought to justice (Ghana);

104.2 Take further steps to address corruption and ensure a thorough and consistent approach to investigations and prosecutions in relation to corruption (Australia);

104.3 Continue the implementation of measures with a view to enhancing the culture of youth participation in decision-making at the community and the society levels, based on the National Youth Strategy 2017–2021 (Romania);
