Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-fifth session from 2 to 13 May 2016. The review of Thailand was held at the 16th meeting on 11 May 2016. The delegation of Thailand was headed by the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Justice, Chamchao Chaianukij. At its 20th meeting, held on 13 May 2016, the Working Group adopted the report on Thailand.

2. On 12 January 2016, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Thailand: El Salvador, France and Maldives.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Thailand:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/THA/1);

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/THA/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/THA/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Australia, Belgium, the Czech Republic, Germany, Lichtenstein, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to Thailand through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Justice, Mr. Charnchao Chaiyanukij, said a national consultation had been organized to allow public participation in the national report drafting process.

6. Thailand incorporated the accepted recommendations from the first review cycle in the Third National Human Rights Plan to ensure a more holistic and effective implementation by all relevant government agencies.

7. Thailand became a party to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and its Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (the Palermo Protocol), the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure and the International Labour Organization (ILO) Promotional Framework for Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 2006 (No. 187).

8. Thailand withdrew several reservations and interpretative declarations to human rights instruments, including articles 6 and 9 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, article 16 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and article 18 of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

9. Several human rights-related laws were passed or upgraded, including the Gender Equality Act, Justice Fund Act, Amendment to the Organic Law on Anti-Corruption and amendment to the Criminal Code on the criminalization of child pornography. The draft amendment to the Labour Protection Act and draft act on alternative measures to normal criminal proceedings were sent to the National Legislative Assembly for their deliberation.

10. Thailand combined its drug laws under a new single code, with proportional penalties for drug offences. The new code encourages alternatives to punishment, and introduces measures for minor drug offences to provide drug users with voluntary treatment and rehabilitation rather than incarceration.

11. Thailand achieved most of the Millennium Development Goals and continues efforts to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals, including the Education for All policy, Universal Health Coverage and intensified efforts against human trafficking and corruption. The Government approved the expansion of its child support grant scheme, the establishment of an education fund and a project to improve the quality of life of the homeless.

12. Thailand strengthened migrant worker protection through a nationwide registration scheme and memorandums of understanding on labour cooperation with four neighbouring countries, birth registration for all children born in the country and the provision of access to education and health care.

13. Thailand allows victims and witnesses in ongoing human trafficking cases to stay temporarily and work legally. It has expedited the verification and granting of legal status to students with nationality status problems.

14. Thailand will further raise awareness and understanding of human rights and take human rights into consideration when formulating policies or performing duties.

15. Thailand needs to overcome the political challenge that resulted from years of social divisiveness and conflicts. Meanwhile, it conducted a national reform to improve infrastructure, enhance the efficiency of public administration and solve longstanding problems, such as corruption.

16. Freedom of expression may be restricted only as necessary to maintain public order and prevent further polarization in society. The challenge is to maintain a balance when enforcing relevant laws, so as not to undermine rights and freedoms, especially when exercised in good faith and intentions.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

17. During the interactive dialogue, 99 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

18. Cuba welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan, Gender Equality Act, Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act and Protection of Vulnerable Persons Act.

19. The Czech Republic made recommendations.

20. Denmark was concerned about the expanded scope of crimes for which the death penalty is applicable, and arbitrary and incommunicado detention without safeguards against torture.

21. Djibouti welcomed cooperation with international human rights mechanisms and the Third National Human Rights Plan and noted laws, policies and strategies against domestic violence, and on gender equality and education.

22. Ecuador highlighted efforts to reduce poverty and gender equality.

23. Egypt commended the development of a new human rights plan, promotion of the rights of women and persons with disabilities, enhanced access to the right to education and amendment to the Criminal Code on child pornography.

24. Fiji noted measures to address violence against women and children, including domestic violence, particularly the development of a manual on a non-violent approach to child-rearing.

25. Finland noted that several laws had gravely restricted the rights to freedom of opinion, expression and assembly and asked about measures taken to ensure the consistency with international law of national legislation on the freedoms of expression and peaceful assembly.

26. Georgia commended the ratification of the Palermo Protocol and the decision to extend a standing invitation to the special procedures.

27. Germany was concerned about restrictions on freedoms of expression, association and assembly.

28. Greece was concerned about restrictions on the rights to free speech, association and peaceful assembly.

29. Guatemala welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan and hoped that the new constitution would include democratic and human rights principles.

30. Honduras welcomed the ratification of the Palermo Protocol and the signing of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance.

31. Italy appreciated measures to increase the protection of women's and children's rights.

32. India appreciated legislative initiatives and the engagement with treaty bodies.

33. Indonesia welcomed the Gender Equality Act and Justice Fund Act and the amendment to the Organic Law on Anti-Corruption.

34. The Islamic Republic of Iran welcomed the approval of the Third National Human Rights Plan and the Twelfth National Economic and Social Development Plan.

35. Iraq commended Thailand on its consultations for the implementation of the Third National Human Rights Plan.

36. Iceland regretted restrictions on the right to redress, freedom of expression and peaceful assembly, the broader scope and application of the death penalty, and that human rights defenders were subjected to prosecution, harassment, killings and enforced disappearance.

37. Japan welcomed measures to combat trafficking and expected rapid progress in unresolved cases of enforced disappearances.

38. Kazakhstan welcomed the ratification of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Palermo Protocol, the signing of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance and a standing invitation extended to the special procedures.

39. Kuwait appreciated measures to improve the social welfare system, especially for vulnerable groups.

40. Kyrgyzstan welcomed the withdrawal of reservations and interpretative declarations to human rights instruments.

41. The Lao People's Democratic Republic welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan and progress in enhancing gender equality, the rights to work, health and education.

42. Latvia welcomed the standing invitation to the special procedures. It was concerned about continued restrictions on freedom of expression.

43. Lebanon welcomed legislative measures to guarantee human rights.

44. Libya noted measures to implement recommendations from the first cycle.

45. Luxembourg was concerned about restrictions on freedoms of expression, opinion, assembly and association, and about refugees' rights.

46. Madagascar noted legislative and institutional measures to strengthen human rights.

47. The Philippines noted the Gender Equality Act and the National Human Rights Plan and appreciated efforts in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations region to seek for better protection of the rights of migrant workers.

48. Maldives welcomed efforts to combat sexual violence and the adoption of the Gender Equality Act. It also appreciated measures to promote the rights of persons with disabilities, empower women and promote youth development.

49. Mexico welcomed measures related to trafficking in persons and the Gender Equality Act.

50. Montenegro appreciated the National Human Rights Plan and efforts to address violence against women. It noted concerns about human trafficking for purposes of sexual exploitation and forced labour, including child prostitution.

51. Morocco welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan and noted the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals in areas related to poverty reduction, gender equality and access to potable water.

52. Mozambique welcomed the National Human Rights Plan, the Gender Equality Act, the Justice Fund Act, the Protection of Vulnerable Persons Act and the amendment to the Criminal Code on child pornography.

53. Namibia welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan and the Gender Equality Act encouraging improvement to the welfare system. It expressed concern about the inclusion of the death penalty in the new Anti-Corruption Law, thereby expanding the use of the death penalty for economic crimes.

54. Poland welcomed the standing invitation extended to the special procedures and the National Human Rights Plan.
55. New Zealand expressed concern about a deterioration of the protection and promotion of human rights since the military coup and the downgrading of the National Human Rights Commission of Thailand.
56. Nigeria welcomed government efforts to protect the right to work of all persons and the implementation of the ILO Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organize Convention, 1948 (No. 87), Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining Convention, 1949 (No. 98), and Promotional Framework for Occupational Safety and Health Convention, 2006 (No. 187).
57. While appreciating ongoing efforts to counter human trafficking and the ratification of the Palermo Protocol, Norway was concerned about restrictions on freedom of opinion and expression, peaceful assembly and association.
58. Pakistan welcomed the National Human Rights Plan and the plans for social and economic development with a focus on empowerment and protection of women, elderly persons, persons with disabilities, children, migrants, asylum seekers and ethnic minorities.
59. Panama appreciated legislative efforts to protect vulnerable groups, women and children.
60. Paraguay hoped that the National Plan 2017-2021 would allow further progress on human rights.
61. Malaysia acknowledged achievements in human trafficking and social protection programmes for vulnerable groups encouraging Thailand to address inequality, promote children's rights and achieve gender equality.
62. The Netherlands appreciated the signing of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance. It was concerned about restrictions on freedom of expression and opinion and the persons detained, imprisoned, tortured or killed for their peaceful exercise of their rights.
63. While welcoming the standing invitation to the special procedures, the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure, Portugal expressed concern that the National Human Rights Commission had lost its A status.
64. The delegation stated that the Ministry of Justice had submitted a draft act on the prevention and suppression of torture and enforced disappearance to the Cabinet for consideration. The passing of the draft act would enable the ratification of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance.
65. On the downgraded status of the National Human Rights Commission, the Government stood ready to provide any assistance to strengthen its capacity and work.
66. The Cabinet instructed all ministries to implement the Human Rights Action Plan and report annually to the Ministry of Justice on the progress made regarding implementation.
67. Thailand drafted a new Penitentiary Act. Significant improvements to access to health care in the Thai penitentiary system were made. To address overcrowding in detention centres, Thailand considered several alternatives to imprisonment. Thailand continued to provide specific care for vulnerable prisoner groups, including women and mothers with children.
68. Thailand provided legal assistance and services to all Thais and non-Thais without discrimination.
69. With respect to the recommendation of the Committee on the Rights of the Child to raise the minimum age of criminal responsibility from 10 to 12 years, Thailand conducted several studies that helped to identify further actions to be taken when the new minimum age was imposed.
70. To protect children from the emerging threats in the digital world, Thailand amended the Criminal Code to establish a wider definition of child pornography and impose more severe punishments against people found guilty of related offences.
71. Thailand introduced the Child Protection Policy in both schools and families.
72. Prevention measures against child sexual exploitation were also introduced to effectively prevent foreign tourists with sexual criminal records from re-committing the crimes or re-entering Thailand.
73. All children in Thailand have the right to be registered at birth, allowing them to stay in the country and have access to basic services, such as education and health care.
74. Thailand was considering the possibility of withdrawing its reservation to article 22 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, to accord the necessary protection and assistance to children of refugees and asylum seekers.
75. The 2015 Gender Equality Act protected everyone from gender-based discrimination, including persons whose sexual expression was different from their biological sex.
76. The Cabinet endorsed the proposal to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and to sign the Marrakesh Treaty to Facilitate Access to Published Works for Persons Who Are Blind, Visually Impaired, or Otherwise Print Disabled. Thailand intended to further amend the Empowerment of Persons with Disabilities Act, as recommended by the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.
77. Thailand made significant progress in providing care and services for older persons, who enjoyed free services such as public transportation and universal health coverage.

78. Thailand was working on providing remedies to victims of trafficking in persons and bringing the offenders to justice.

79. Thailand was committed to protecting all workers equally and without any distinction, especially on the basis of race and nationality. Several laws concerning labour protection, social security and workers' compensation had been revised to improve workers' protection in line with international labour standards.

80. Thailand had launched a new policy to allow migrant workers to renew their registrations and obtain a stay permit and work permit for two years, to encourage them to identify themselves to receive benefits, to be legally recognized, and to prevent exploitation.

81. In tackling forced labour in the sea fisheries industry, the Royal Ordinance on Fisheries was passed in 2015 to empower the authorities to combat unlawful labour practices in the fishing and seafood industries. The Ministerial Regulation on Labour Protection in Sea Fisheries Work took effect in December 2014.

82. Migrant workers could be members and join the activities of trade unions and participate in collective bargaining. Currently, Thailand was studying the feasibility of ratifying the ILO Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organize Convention, 1948 (No. 87), and Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining Convention, 1949 (No. 98).

83. The Government continued to ensure that relevant laws and measures used to address disputes relating to the possible encroachment of public land were implemented through a fair and transparent process.

84. Evictions were not arbitrary and carried out only in accordance with a court ruling. Local communities could prove their cases against the claims of the Government, especially those who had lived in the area for generations. People with limited means were given assistance.

85. With respect to the killing of land rights defenders, it was the responsibility of the Government to bring perpetrators to justice and support the families of those defenders through the available public redress and compensation scheme.

86. On the situation in the southern border provinces, special security laws had been invoked to maintain peace and security. Implementation of such laws was strictly based on necessity and proportionality. The Government regularly reviewed the need for and considered the possibility to reduce the use of such laws according to the situation on the ground.

87. Qatar welcomed the adoption of the Third National Human Rights Plan.

88. The Republic of Korea encouraged discussions on the draft Constitution and stressed the importance of ensuring full respect for freedom of expression and other human rights.

89. Romania welcomed the commitment to solving the issues regarding human trafficking and forced labour and emphasized the importance of implementing the Third National Human Rights Plan.

90. Senegal welcomed the submission of an interim report, the Third National Human Rights Plan, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act and the Protection of Vulnerable Persons Act.

91. Sierra Leone welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan, the Universal Health Coverage Scheme and the National Plan for Older Persons.

92. Singapore welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan and the commitment to protecting persons in vulnerable situations.

93. Slovakia welcomed the Protection of Vulnerable Persons Act and the amendment to the Criminal Code on child pornography while expressing concern about the applicability of the death penalty for various criminal offences.

94. Slovenia welcomed the commitment to mainstreaming human rights into the education system on different levels.

95. South Africa highlighted the achievement of several of the Millennium Development Goals.

96. Spain noted that some legal provisions could undermine freedom of expression.

97. The State of Palestine noted efforts in the health sector to ensure high quality health care and welcomed improvement and prioritization of education.

98. The Sudan welcomed the amendment to the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act and the Justice Fund Act of 2015 to ensure that everyone has an equal access to justice.

99. Swaziland welcomed the commitment of the Government and civil society organizations to upholding, observing and ensuring the consistency of national laws with international human rights standards.

100. Sweden was concerned about increased restrictions on freedom of expression in connection with the constitutional referendum, encouraging full cooperation with the United Nations in Thailand and follow-through on its standing invitation to the special procedures.

101. Switzerland expressed concern about the interim constitution, which does not adequately respect and protect human rights, and about the application of laws restricting fundamental rights.

102. Timor-Leste remained concerned at the inclusion of the death penalty in the Anti-Corruption Law.
103. Togo noted the commitment to tackling social and economic inequalities.
104. Turkey was concerned about the record of Thailand on the protection of the rights of migrants, especially women and children at detention facilities.
105. Uganda noted concerns about human trafficking, especially in illegal fishing activities, including forced labour and child pornography.
106. The United Arab Emirates praised the achievement of several of the Millennium Development Goals, steps to promote the rights of workers and persons with disabilities and to protect children from child labour, and the Women's Development Plan.
107. The United Kingdom encouraged Thailand to actively engage with the universal periodic review process and support its civil society.
108. The United States was concerned by restrictions on freedoms of expression and peaceful assembly and the broad powers given to the military under article 44 of the interim constitution, including expanded internal policing responsibilities.
109. Uruguay welcomed positive progress on torture and enforced disappearances.
110. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan, the National Social and Economic Development Plan and the allocation of more than 20 per cent of the national budget to education.
111. Viet Nam noted progress in poverty reduction and the rights to work and health.
112. Yemen praised efforts to draft a new constitution.
113. Albania welcomed the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict and the Third National Human Rights Plan.
114. Algeria welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan and encouraged the improvement of social protection of workers.
115. Argentina welcomed the progress in drafting a new constitution and the actions aimed at promoting and protecting the rights of children.
116. The delegation stated that a national referendum on the draft Constitution was to be held on 7 August. Volunteers would disseminate the draft Constitution to enhance the public's understanding. The outcome is entirely up to each Thai citizen. After the Constitution is adopted, relevant organic laws will be passed to pave way for general elections.
117. The Government fully respects the rights to freedom of expression and assembly. However, given the political conflicts, some limitations are in place to prevent further social divisiveness and political conflicts. The Government has no intention to impose restrictions on ordinary citizens who have good intentions.
118. Section 44 of the Interim Constitution is invoked only under specific circumstances and has been used in limited circumstances. Since its entry into force, the National Council for Peace and Order has exercised its power under this section to maintain public order and to enhance bureaucratic efficiency where ordinary laws and regulations do not exist, such as in anti-human trafficking efforts, anti-drug policy and civil aviation issues.
119. The purpose of Order No. 13/2559 of the National Council for Peace and Order is to enable military officers to help the police to suppress organized crime, such as extortion, human trafficking, child and labour abuse, gambling and prostitution. It does not deprive defendants of the right to file complaints against military officers in case of abuse of power.
120. The Thai monarchy has always been the main pillar of Thai society. Section 112 of the Criminal Code protects the rights or reputation of the King, the Queen and the Heir apparent or the Regent, in a similar way that libel law does for commoners. As with other criminal offences, proceedings on the lese-majesty cases are conducted in accordance with due legal process. The Computer Crime Act is under amendment to make clearer definitions in each section to prevent misinterpretation of the law.
121. Thailand currently hosts over 100,000 displaced persons from Myanmar, and irregular migrants and asylum seekers from other countries. Thailand has started its internal process to study the feasibility of a screening mechanism to distinguish those with genuine protection needs from economic migrants.
122. The use of military courts is limited to serious offences, most of which relate to the possession or the use of heavy firearms. Military judges have similar knowledge and experiences, including on human rights, and defendants are given the same rights as in an ordinary court. This is to ensure the right to fair trial in judicial proceedings during this political transition of the country.
123. Thailand provides basic education to every child regardless of nationality and legal status. Every school in Thailand must admit children who are legal or illegal migrants, unregistered or stateless children at no cost, so they can enjoy the same right to education as Thai children.
124. The Ministry of Education places a high priority on teaching human rights concepts to children, particularly at the primary and secondary levels. The curriculum includes a separate subject on civic education, specifying the rights and responsibilities of Thai citizens. Capacity-building is also provided to teachers.

125. Australia encouraged Thailand to continue its effort to reduce impunity and protect the rights of victims and vulnerable communities. It was concerned about limitations on freedom of expression and assembly, the extension of law enforcement powers to military personnel and using military courts to try civilians.

126. Austria was concerned about the special powers of the National Council for Peace and Order that limit human rights and the rule of law, the minimum age of criminal responsibility and the safety of journalists.

127. Azerbaijan welcomed measures to strengthen the normative and institutional framework for human rights protection, especially for gender equality, access to justice and the protection of vulnerable persons, and against human trafficking and corruption.

128. Bahrain welcomed increased awareness-raising and respect of human rights.

129. Bangladesh noted the challenges faced by Thailand, including a middle-income trap, widening inequality and unfair distribution of income.

130. Belgium was concerned about the situation of fundamental freedoms and the precarious situation of human rights defenders.

131. Bhutan welcomed the National Economic and Social Development Plans and the sufficiency economy.

132. The Plurinational State of Bolivia acknowledged the achievements made since the first cycle.

133. Botswana noted the Gender Equality Act, the amendments to the 2008 Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act and to the Criminal Code on child pornography.

134. While appreciating the Gender Equality Act and anti-human trafficking efforts, Brazil expressed concern about the orders of the National Council for Peace and Order, the lese-majesty law, the Public Assembly Law and the expansion of the death penalty.

135. Brunei Darussalam welcomed the Protection of Vulnerable Persons Act and the allocation of more than 20 per cent of the national budget for education.

136. Cambodia appreciated achievements in economic development and poverty eradication and the rights to work, health and education, the protection of vulnerable groups and the prevention of human trafficking.

137. Canada made recommendations.

138. Chad welcomed legislative and policy measures for human rights promotion and protection and cooperation with international human rights mechanisms.

139. Chile welcomed the Gender Equality Act, the Protection of Vulnerable Persons Act and the amendment to the Penal Code on child pornography.

140. China appreciated the investment in health and education and measures to protect children, women, the elderly and migrant workers.

141. Colombia welcomed the Third National Human Rights Plan.

142. The Congo appreciated the high importance attached to the protection of human rights and combating socioeconomic inequalities.

143. Costa Rica was concerned that an elected government had been deposed by the military. It also expressed concern about the trial of civilians in military courts and the indefinite application of State of emergency laws.

144. France welcomed the signing of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance.

145. Sri Lanka noted the drafting of a new constitution and the sustained progress in achieving most of the Millennium Development Goals.

146. Nepal noted the de facto moratorium on the death penalty in place since 2009 and the Third National Human Rights Plan that aims to abolish it. It also praised the consistent progress in socioeconomic development.

147. Myanmar welcomed measures to improve the social welfare services for all workers, including migrant and foreign workers.

148. Armenia appreciated the steps taken to ensure access to health-care services and to reduce maternal and infant mortality rates.

149. The delegation stated that a draft act on prevention and suppression of torture and enforced disappearance would set up the specific offence of torture and enforced disappearance, based on the definitions stipulated in the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, with the criminal punishment dependent upon the grave nature of the crime.

150. Thailand is working closely with various international organizations and civil society to raise awareness on the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment among the concerned agencies to prepare them for its effective implementation. The Ministry of Justice will submit for the Cabinet's consideration plans to ratify the Optional Protocol.

151. Thailand is aware of its duty to ensure that human rights defenders can work in a safe and enabling environment. The adoption of the draft act on the prevention and suppression of torture and enforced disappearance will strengthen the protection of human rights defenders.

152. The Ministry of Justice started studying the possibility of abolishing the death penalty five years ago. The country's intention was reaffirmed in the Third National Human Rights Plan. Despite varying public sentiment, the Ministry of Justice continues to look into the possibility of abolishing the death penalty.

153. The Ministry of Tourism and Sports and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime continues to implement the second phase of "Project Childhood" on enhancing law enforcement capacity for national and transnational action to identify and effectively act upon child sex offenders travelling to Thailand.

154. The minimum age allowed for entering into marriage under the Civil and Commercial Code is 17 years, or lower if permitted by a court decision. For those under 20 years of age, parental consent is needed.

155. The right to preserve cultural heritage was made concrete as Thailand is becoming a party to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage.

156. A number of primary schools in border and marginalized areas that offer nine years of compulsory education have been given special assistance by the Ministry of Education to provide multilingual teaching to ethnic children speaking non-Thai languages.

157. Thailand will take a realistic approach and make sure that the recommendations it decides to accept correspond with its capacity to implement them. The Government is determined to work closely with all stakeholders in the follow-up stage. It intends to raise awareness of the review outcome and the recommendations to be accepted to the wider public.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations **
